

IT'S SO IF IT'S IN THE LEDGER.

Special Notice.

There will be no Prayer meeting at the M. E. Church, South, to-morrow night on account of the revival services at Mitchell's Chapel, East Maysville. We hope all will attend and assist in these services.

T. W. WATTS.

High Water Mark 831.394 17.

The above sum represents the amount which the Western and Southern has paid in death claims to its policy holders. This sum was dispensed among two hundred and forty different families, and were we to take into consideration the dependents of those who received benefits from the Western and Southern, we could safely state that over five hundred people were benefited by those who had prudently and foresight to prepare for the time when death would knock at their door and take a loved one from the midst of a happy family.

We read almost daily of the untold misery into which families are plunged by reason of not having made preparation for the expenses and results of the death occasioned by the loss of a father, a husband, a mother, a wife or a child, who perhaps had been the support of the entire family.

How often could the hardship which a death necessarily brings have been avoided had a little wisdom and tact been used and had preparation been made for an event which is liable to occur at any time. Industrial Insurance as offered by the Western and Southern is one of the greatest boons to the working man, to the wage earner, which human wisdom has as yet devised.

The premiums are small and are collected weekly at the house of the insured, and hence no inconvenience is felt in their payment.

Providing the applicant be in good health, policies can be secured insuring the entire family from the grandparent at 60 years down to the babe a year old. Not only this, but the promptness with which the Western and Southern pays its death claims, is no small item to be overlooked. There are no tedious delays, no unnecessary formalities; all claims are paid immediately upon receipt of satisfactory proof of death.

Why would it not be a good plan to see J. L. Todd or one of his agents and insure in this company?

It is the best, and the best is always the cheapest.

A FEW (MORE) REMARKS.

Another As-to-risk Gets After "The Bulletin" With a Stick of Cautious.

MAYSVILLE, Ky., Jan. 23d, 1894.

To The Ledger: Will you permit an As-to-risk a few words concerning an article that appeared in the editorial columns of the penny-pimp of January 23d, that seems to find so much complaint because Mr. As-to-risk does not sign his name to the article complained of in your issue of the 23d?

Why he did not sign his name can only be accounted for on two theories: One that a certain amount of innate modesty prevented it, the other, "and more probable one," that dreading the thought of letting his identity be known, and thereby incurring the wrath of the mighty power that seems to lumber after the pork in the kettles of bunco advertisements.

But whichever motive caused him to withhold his identity, I submit that it was more creditable than the action of the Editor of the aforesaid journal when he placed an article that has all the earmarks of a communication in his editorial column, thereby trying to deceive an unsuspecting public who know too well that his position as Editor does not require of him such an impossibility as writing an editorial.

Still, in his mad desire for liberal patronage, he seems to lose sleep over the hardships that are heaped on his shining exemplar of scientific specialities, and the great injustice that is done to them and the community by a law that is now in force in thirty-four states of the Union.

Having been driven from these states he would have them swoop down on Kentucky where he may enjoy the "thrill" that follows fawning.

If his skill is so great I wonder why they do not attempt to relieve the aforesaid Editor of that troublesome disease called tallow-on-the-brain, the symptoms of which have been so plain evinces he assumed the editorial chair of the penny-pimp.

Trusting that you will also keep us unknown for the sake of our right to exist, we will sign ourselves

All Along the Line.

A board presser of Dr. Hale's Household Ointment, Mrs. I. S. Jacobs of Farmington, Maine, writes that she suffered five years with various rheumatic and running sores on her leg, and was completely cured by its use. D. S. Piles, Salisbury, Vt., writes: "We cannot live without it; it relieves my state of asthma at once, and has cured my burn or hurt on my hand instantly." Under date of May 30, 1893, R. H. Simpson, Leroy N. S. writes: "I used Hale's Ointment for rheumatism three years ago and have not been troubled since. It is the finest ointment in the world for general use; 25c per box. For sale by Power & Reynolds, Drugs."

THOMAS A. DAVIS, Postmaster.

Unlearned Kentuckians.

A Kentucky delegation, comprising several prominent officials, are in Washington. They are to appear before the River and Harbor Committee. They seek to have improvements made in the Kentucky river, which runs through Congressmen Berry's and McCreary's Districts. The party consists of ex-Governor J. Proctor Knott, L. C. Norman, W. J. Hendrick, Fayette Hewitt, J. Stoddard Johnson, W. F. Dandridge, S. Black, George L. Payson, M. P. Gray, George H. Harper, L. F. Johnson, all of Frankfort, and J. O. Harris and W. W. Cleary of Covington.

Perfectly Right.

For some time past the C. and O. Rail road has been closing down on the employees in the way of supplies, and now whenever an employee wants a tool, lantern, or anything of the kind, he must first return the old article regardless of what condition it be in ere another is granted.

This is to prevent the practice that has been indulged to some extent of one man having several articles of the same sort when entitled to but one. It is not a bad idea and certainly a saving one for the company.

A Moon Trick.

The Danville Advocate has the following item:

A scurvy "joke" was attempted by some unknown parties in Danville last week, when a proposition for the Corbett-Mitchell fight was sent to The Cincinnati Enquirer offering $20,000 for the battle to occur in Danville and signing the names of two prominent Ministers and a physician to the offer. The article was sent anonymously and not by the paper's correspondent. It was a contemptible trick and the perpetrators of it should be severely punished if found out.

The persistent cough which usually follows an attack of the grip can be permanently cured by taking Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. W. A. McGuire of McKay, O., says: "La grippe left me with a severe cough. After using several different medicines without relief, I tried Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which effected a permanent cure. I have also found it to be without an equal for children, when troubled with colds or croup." Twenty-five and fifty cent bottles for sale by John J. Reynolds, Druggist.

"Just Landed."

Indianapolis Sentinel.—There is much genuine fun in "Just Landed," which was given for the first time here at the Park Theatre recently. The story of the play has to do with a lot of emigrants who arrive in New York, and have some stirring experiences. There were, of course, large audiences, and the laughter and applause were almost incessant. Perkins D. Fisher, always an original comedian, Gus Mortimer, Dick Moroso, John C. Leach, Jean Delmar, Elsie Willard, Mike, Texarkana, one of the greatest dancers who ever showed her agility here, and other clever people are in the cast, and they introduce various taking specialties. At Washington Opera house Friday, January 30th.

Merchants' Attention!

ITS TRUE PURPOSE.

Only Ignorance Declares the A. P. A. an Anti-Catholic Society.

Too much stress cannot be laid upon the fact that the American Protective Association and kindred associations are not opposed to any individuals on account of their religion, and it is an evidence of their greater liberality, as compared with the intolerance of their Catholic confederates, that this spirit is daily becoming more apparent in the comments on Roman Catholic issues in the columns of our contemporaries.

The Legal American of Minneapolis puts this point very properly when it says that the Romanist has as much right to his religious preferences as the Protestant has to his. A man has a perfect right to be Protestant, Jew, infidel or Romanist, if he derives any satisfaction from it, so long as he does not seek to make his religion an element of political power.

And that is the one great object the A. P. A. has in view—to stop the inclination to make Catholicism even more an element of warfare than against those who are not against Catholicism, but against that great religious political machine known as Roman Catholicism that the A. P. A. is making war; not against persons, but against principles which it believes, with every reason, to be inimical with our National welfare; not against those who are led by the nose, but against those who do the leading; not against individuals, but against a great political institution of which these individuals are a part, if they contribute to its support.

The patriotic order has better friends to the blind followers of Popery than the Church which hounds them and keeps them in intellectual slavery, for they would lift up the individual and make him a free American citizen, while the Church would keep him in ignorance, which is his blind obedience, use him as a voter to further her temporal interests, take his money and give him in return nothing but a stunted intellect and a superstitious nature, both the results of parochialism and priestcraft.

We would remind Roman Catholics of the fact that they are living in a country where a large and constantly increasing proportion of the inhabitants are already of American predilections or are rapidly advancing in that direction. We would ask them if the treatment they receive at the hands of their Protestant neighbors differs to-day from what it was before this patriotic movement had taken the gigantic strides it has during the past two years?

Do not all the members of the patriotic order buy and sell with and among them heretofore? Do they not become as men just as they did before the movement became general? Do they not meet the Catholics on the streets with the same friendliness as of yore, treating them as heartily and kindly as ever? What great difference has been wrought between Protestants and Catholics in a personal way through this movement? None whatever, except where the Catholics have taken the initiative and instituted the boycott.

Whatever difference can be found must be attributed to the intolerance, Catholic intolerance, Catholic antagonism and priestly domination.

The A. P. A. directly, and Americanism incidentally, is by no means striving to convert the Catholic from his religion, but he is asked in all sincerity and with a very legitimate purpose to become an American, an American Catholic, if he will, or if he can; he is asked to be American in his sympathies and ideas, not Romanist, and it is believed that there are thousands of Catholics here in America who would be glad to throw off the yoke of Rome and be in every sense American if the opportunity was afforded to them and this opportunity the A. P. A. is endeavoring to provide.

The A. P. A. asks Catholics to become more thoroughly affiliated with this country, with the country of their adoption or birth, and to be as patriotic as the rest of that country, our homes and institutions, and to further the best interests alike of themselves and of the country itself.

Catholics should learn that the A. P. A. is their friend—their best friend, since it would save them from influences and associations and connections which have been most harmful to them in the past, and for whose operations there is no room in this country. The A. P. A. is their friend, not their enemy. Let Catholics read what has been said on this question intelligently and discuss it justly, and the danger and decline in the numbers of that country, our homes and institutions, and to further the best interests alike of themselves and of the country itself.

THE TAX ON BACHELORS.

I dreamed a dream in the midst of my slumbers, And as fast as I dreamed it was coined into numbers. It seemed that a law had been recently made, That a tax on bachelors' pates should be laid, And, in order to make them all willing to marry.

The tax was as large as a man could well carry. The bachelors grumbled and said 'twas no use, 'Twas a horrid injustice and a horrid abuse, And desired that to save their own hearts' blood from spilling.

Of such a vile tax they would not pay a shilling! But the rulers determined then still to pursue, So they set all the bachelors up at vendue.

A rattle was sent through the town to and fro, To rattle his bell and his trumpet to blow, And to call out to all he might meet in his way:

"Ho! Forty odd bachelors sold here to-day! And presently all the old maids in town, Each in her very best bonnet and gown, From thirty to sixty, fair, plain, red and pale, O'er every description, all looked to the sale.

The auctioneer then in his lair began, And called out aloud as he held up a man: "How much am I offered—now who wants to buy?"

In a twinkling each maiden responded "I'll!" In short, at a highly extravagant price, The bachelors all were sold in a trice, And forty odd maidens, some younger, some older, Each lured an old bachelor home on her shoulder.
